SITUATION SUMMARY

Winter King Tides December 2014

A strong storm system passing through the Gulf of Alaska has generated a large long period west swell which will impact the coast overnight into at least Saturday afternoon. This large swell will result in large breaking waves at the beaches with an extreme amount of wave run up pushing water on to the beaches. Compounding these beach related issues, we are approaching the winter season King Tides which are anticipated to begin on Sunday lasting into Tuesday. The large waves and run up coupled with the building high tide will result in coastal flooding on Saturday along the immediate coast for low lying areas, especially in and around marshes and sloughs. Coastal flooding should stay out of the San Francisco Bay front on Saturday but will become a concern on Sunday as the King Tides build along the central California coast. Affected areas will include:

- Low lying areas along the immediate coast
- Coastal trails and sidewalks
- Low lying roadways and underpasses.
- Parking lots
- Coastal sloughs and marshes
- Beach visitors may lose entrance and exit to coves and narrow beaches

PUBLIC HEALTH AND MEDICAL (EF-8) SITUATION REPORT, as of 12/19/14:

- The outbreak of EVD in West African countries continues to vary. Reported case incidences are fluctuating in Guinea and declining in Liberia. There are signs that the increase in incidence has slowed in Sierra Leone. On November 16, 2014, the World Health Organization (WHO) added Mali to the countries with confirmed cases of Ebola related deaths. However, EVD still does not pose a significant risk to the United States.
- As of their Situation Report dated December 14, 2014, the WHO has reported a cumulative total of 18,603 cases of EVD and 6,915 deaths.
- There are currently no suspected or confirmed cases of Ebola Virus Disease (EVD) in California.
- At present, the situational assessment for the risk of EVD infection in California remains very low.
